DIUS 7 -- 13 JUNE 1944

The Division, using the 508th Parachute Infantry, extended its right flank by establishing a bridgehead across the DOUVE River at BEUZEVILLE LA BASTILLE and contacted the 101st Airborne Division again at BAUPTE. Other elements of the

508th Parachute Infantry Regiment

A combat team composed of the regiment, the 319th Glider Field Artillery Battalion, Battery A, 80th Airborne Antiaircraft Battalion, a detachment from the 307th Airborne Engineer Battalion and one platoon of Troop B, 4th Cavalry Reconnaissance Squadron, attacked south across the DOUVE River. Company F crossed the DOUVE by assault boats at 0001 hours and seized BEUZEVILLE LA BASTILLE. The remainder of the troops crossed the river on a footbridge, constructed by engineers, beginning at 0400 hours. The 1st Battalion cleared CRETEVILLE by 0745 hours, destroyed considerable enemy equipment, including 12 light tanks, and occupied defensive positions at COIGFY. The 2d Battalion met determined resistance outside of BAUPTE but occupied the town by 1800 and established contact with the 101st Airborne Division to the south. The 3d Battalion secured the area between PONT AUNY and MOTOT. During the entire action 14 light tanks were knocked out and sizeable quantities of enemy equipment captured or destroyed.

The 319th and 520th Glider and 188th Field Artillery Battalions fired in support of the 508th Parachute Infantry's crossing of the DOUVE River at BEUZEVILLE LA BASTILLE. These three battalions expended 1,880 rounds in 50 minutes, and their fires were reinforced as well by the 90th Division Artillery. The 319th Glider Field Artillery Battalion displaced south of the DOUVE River at 1800 hours. The 456th Parachute Field Artillery Battalion moved from the LE HAM sector into positions north of PICAUVILLE at 1800 hours.
