

infantrymen from 5th Battalion continued the attack on the town. Fred Orlosky describes the entry into town: "We got fired at from Pouppeville. They sent some of us in one direction and some in still another to try and surround a large house where most of the firing was coming from. Kraeger was wounded in the arm but refused to leave.

"I saw Lieutenant Nathan Marks get shot in the forehead while peering around the corner of a small building towards the larger house where the Germans were holed up. Sergeant Tom Criswell and PFC Bob Richards were shot within a few yards of me as they were running towards the big house in the height of the attack. It was a short fight. We gathered some prisoners, most of whom were Russian Georgian troops fighting for the Germans."

"I almost got General Taylor with a grenade when we were fighting for the houses," said Private Richard Evans. "I tried to heave a grenade through the window of a house from which snipers had been firing at us. It hit the cross-frame of the window and bounced back out near our position where it exploded."

Corporal Virgil Danforth said, "As we came into the town, the Germans began to withdraw into their headquarters, which was on the edge of the town nearest the beach. Until that time, my squad hadn't lost a man. Their defense in the town wasn't very well organized so we cleaned them out pretty quickly, but when we hit the headquarters building it was a different story. They had two snipers in a tree that we couldn't see, and they killed Lieutenant Nathan Marks, PFC Bob Richards, and one other from my squad. A sergeant from our headquarters platoon was hit in the open and every time the medic, T/5 Harold Nolicy, tried to get to him, the Germans would drive him back. I got over at the side and tried to draw their fire so he could get to the downed men, but they put a bullet in me too. It hit the ring of my helmet and split in two and half of it went into my skull and I still have the headaches to prove it. Captain Kraeger then got hit in the arm with a wooden bullet. About all this did to him was make him madder.⁶ We brought up a bazooka and fired a few rounds into the headquarters building and they decided to surrender.⁷

Colonel Ewell thrust his head around the corner of a house as his group attacked each house with rifle and grenades. A

RECORD OF CASUALTY INVESTIGATION

SUBJECT: Burial of Dead.

On June 6, 1944 at 1600 I had occasion to bury six (6) American soldiers in a little orchard in "Fourzeville" in France. These men were killed in action. They were buried in a common grave and their personal effects (which were collected by me) were turned in to a Medical officer at Company A, 265 Medical Bn.

The orchard is in a courtyard of a large house that was being used as the HQ for the Germans stationed in the village. It is a large house on the left side of the road coming up from the beach. At each man's head was placed a cross with their name and serial number. A list of their names was turned in and radioed to their outfit. I do not remember all of their names, and I lost the list when I was evacuated.

This is as nearly accurate as I can make it.
